Um, I think this award sort of explains itself. Indy Racers gets the first 8-ball of the year. Miguel Batista (11), Tom Glavine (10), and Jeremy Bonderman (8) were among his top hurlers. I was sort of impressed with Glavine's K's, but then I realized that he pitched two games this week.

Hooter Hounds

ERA 7.35 ERA

Highest

Hey remember that time Jose Canseco pitched and trashed his arm, sending him to the DL? Well that great moment in retardedness is immortalized with the Canseco Ball, which goes to the worst ERA of the week. I am proud to be the receiver of this inaugural award. While I would like to thank Smoltz, Radke, and Hudson for pitching like crap, I have to first thank myself for being dumb enough to start Dewon Brazelton, like that is ever a smart move.

A-TEAM AWARD

Best Team Performance 6-4 over The Johnny Dickshots

What better way to honor the team with the best overall performance than to give them and award named after the sweetest team ever assembled? Obviously we're not just looking at scores here as Wilpon had a small margin of victory. But his offensive output would've beat most every team. So congrats. Somewhere Mr. T is smiling, that or he's just waiting to appear on some 80's clip show on VH1.

SHIRTLESS PONCH AWARD

Worst Team Performance 1-9 loss to Copperminers

I don't even need to go over the stats here. If you fail to check your team, you automatically get sent to Ponch's house for some hot and sweaty Latino passion.

Peter Gammons Predicts He Will Finish Season Lonely And Depressed

April 6, 2006 | Onion Sports

BRISTOL, CT—In his 'Looking Ahead In 2006' column on ESPN's website, baseball analyst Peter Gammons said that there will be "no big surprises this year," predicting that he would once again finish the season in the cellar, all alone and unable to let go of the events of the past seven months. "Although some experts are saying I will fold in the hot weather come August, I'm certain I will make it to the playoffs and head into the World Series healthy and excited, as I do each year," Gammons wrote Monday. "But when all is said and done, I am going to end up lying prone on the world champions' clubhouse floor, where I will remain, covered in old champagne and stacks of 2006 box scores, until someone wakes me up next spring." Gammons also predicted that he would have an extremely quiet offseason in which he doesn't make any major moves.
